EUROPE WAITS HITLER MOVE AMID RUMORS

Report Nazi Troops March To Spanish Border Denied In London Quarters.

NERVE WAR HINTED

Foreign Office Doubts Petain Has Resigned; Mediterranean Assault Speculated on.

(Compiled from wires of the Associated Press and United Press.)

LONDON—Completely contradictory reports circulated in London quarters today as all Europe speculated on the next move of Adolf Hitler.

While some "responsible informants" confirmed reports that German troops were moving through France toward Spain for what was predicted as an all-out Nazi campaign against the Mediterranean, a foreign office spokesman labeled the same reports a Nazi ruse.

The same spokesman said there was nothing to confirm reports Marshal Philippe Petain had resigned in the face of increased demands for collaboration from Germany.

In fact, the report that Petain had already resigned was promptly denied by the French legation at Berne, Switzerland, and Vichy announced that Petain would make a Christmas radio speech at 8 p. m. Vichy time (2 p. m. E. S. T.)

Nevertheless there were some indications that a critical period in Vichy-German relations had arrived and that Petain had reached his limit of "collaboration" with the Germans.

It developed today that Otto Abetz, German envoy to Paris, was in Berlin. Rome announced that Italy was to send Gino Puti to Paris as Italian special envoy.

Circumstantial reports had come from the continent that Petain had stoutly refused to extend Vichy co-operation with Germany.

The foreign office commentator said it seemed evident that the Germans themselves were spreading rumors of a Nazi campaign in the Iberian peninsula "probably with a view of producing another of those German nerve wars with which we have become so familiar."

He put a report of Petain's replacement by Darlan in the same category.

In some quarters it was suggested that German military capacity was insufficient for an immediate new military adventure into the Iberian peninsula but the Germans would have good reason for starting a war of nerves.

True or not, the report spread as Spain and Turkey, at oposite ends of the Mediterranean, were

Hundreds Given Food Baskets For Happy Christmas

Mansfield played Santa Claus to its unfortunate families today by delivering 515 baskets brimming over with food supplies for a bounteous Christmas dinner beginning with ham or chicken and topped off by fresh or canned fruits and sweets.

The Salvation Army citadel where the 155 baskets of the Community Give-a-Christmas program were packed resembled a food store during rush hours today as dozens of people called for their baskets and scores of baskets were carried out to trucks and automobiles for delivery by the Junior Association of Commerce.

Boy Scouts of the city aided in basket distribution for their 21st year with Troops 2 and 6 headed by Bob Dysart and Bob Black lending a hand both at the citadel and on the fleet of conveyances.

Dials for Cab, Gets Fire Truck

The telephone rang in the Central Fire Station yesterday shortly after noon and a fireman answered.

"Hurry down to 58 West Fourth street, right away," said a voice.

"Okay," answered the fireman, and with sirens screaming, he and his fellow-workers dashed through the streets.

Arriving at their destination, they piled off the apparatus.

"Where's the fire?"

"What fire?"

"Didn't you call the fire department?" "No, I just wanted a taxicab."

The bewildered shopper and firemen finally figured out that he had dialed 4281-6 when he meant to dial 4211-6.

PLAN PROGRAM TO HOLD SCHOOL AIR RAID DRILLS

Rural Principals To Receive Instructions; City Staffs To Get Similar Orders.

Plans were underway today to start regular air raid drills in all Richland county schools within a few days so the county's 4,700 village and rural pupils will know what to do if enemy bombers should get this far inland.

Boyd Robinson, county superintendent, said he will distribute complete instructions for drills to superintendents and principals as soon as he can obtain sufficient copies from civilian defense headquarters in Cleveland.

Supt. W. L. Miller of Mansfield schools said no definite steps have been taken to conduct raid drills in the city schools, but a program is expected to be set up soon.

As instructions go to schools, principals and teachers in rural districts will be asked to conduct air raid drills as regularly as fire drills, Robinson said.

The air raid drills, however, will teach pupils to seek shelter in the basements of the schools or in lower hallways which will be known as "air raid refuges." In fire drills pupils go outside the buildings.

Fire sirens in the schools will be used to give warning, but a different system of sounding the alarms will be used for air raids. The air raid drills will be conducted frequently until pupils and teachers recognize the signals and follow orders without a hitch.

Pupils will be warned first not to leave the buildings. They will not be permitted to return to their rooms until the "all-clear" signal is given, and pupils will not be permitted to go home while an air raid is in progress.

Pupil and teacher fire guards will be appointed to see that fire extinguishers are ready for use and that they are brought into prompt service if incendiary bombs scatter fire in the vicinity of the school.

School officials will be urged to choose rooms for "refuges" that have more than one exit and adequate drinking water and toilet facilities.

Parents will be asked to help make the precautionary measures successful by staying at home until the danger is over.

"Do not try to reach the school," the U. S. Office of Civilian Defense warns parents. "You could accomplish no good, and you could do a great deal of harm by such action."

Mayor Sees Hope of U. S. Aid On Development of Airport

If the federal government will certify Mansfield's municipal airport as an important point in the nation's aviation defense plan, the city may expect improvement of the port's facilities in the near future at federal expense.

Mayor W. J. Locke learned this yesterday in a conference with Defense Public Works Director George W. McCordic in Detroit.

The mayor, accompanied by City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr., and Herbert Rusk, met with McCordic in a half hour session in which McCordic told them that any improvements in this area depended upon federal approval.

Locke said that Ward went along as a representative of the Junior Association of Commerce aviation committee while Rusk represented a citizens' committee of interested aviation enthusiasts. Rusk, who is a cement salesman, was appointed a member of the aviation committee because of his experience in the construction of airports in other cities.

The mayor said that formal application for federal sponsorship of a $200,000 program to construct necessary runways at the port will be made in January.

If the government reports favorably upon Mansfield as a defense point, the mayor said he was confident that the government might assume the total cost of the project. No negotiations have been made concerning the shares the government or the city would contribute.

Members of the JAC have gathered together plans for the improvement of the airport. The mayor said that the application to federal authorities will include the JAC plan which calls for the construction of hard-surface runways.

McCordic is director of defense public work in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky. Following the first of the year, the office will be moved to Chicago.

JAPS STEP UP SUBMARINE WAR

Craft Sink Tanker, Attack Three Other Ships Off California Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO—Japanese submarine activity off the California coast, increasing steadily, today put U. S. war craft on their mettle as the navy took steps to cope with the menace of enemy raids against Pacific coast shipping.

In the past 24 hours, one American tanker, the 440-foot Montebello, owned by the Union Oil company, was torpedoed and sunk, three others escaped under attack by Jap submarines, and several other unexplained explosions at sea rocked towns along the California coast.

These attacks came on the heels of a series of raids a few days previous against four other American vessels off the California coast, indicating the enemy is op-

NEEDY RECEIVE CHEER

Thousands Expected Tonight at Special Services In Twelve Churches.

Mansfield stood prepared today to greet Christmas in the traditional cherished manner.

The great buying rush has subsided, the last greeting card has been mailed and tired clerks and postal employes prepared to join the rest of Mansfield in keeping Christmas eve bright in a land touched only recently by war and blackouts.

Thousands of Mansfielders were expected to attend services in 12 of the city churches holding midnight or earlier worship tonight after tying up the last gift and hanging the last bauble on the Christmas tree.

Lights from thousands of candles will burn on altars tonight as churches unite in a spiritual protest against the darkness of war and to re-echo the tidings of a future "Peace On Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Tomorrow Mansfield will sit down to a Christmas dinner knowing that its unfortunate families have been provided with baskets filled by hundreds of organizations and individuals in co-operation with the 12th Community Christmas program.

Sponsored by The Mansfield News-Journal, Junior Association of Commerce and Mansfield Community Fund baskets were sent out to more than 500 families today after being packed at the Salvation Army citadel.

The Give-a-Christmas program handled by the Community Fund provided 350 baskets through "adoptions" made by organizations and individuals while funds derived from voluntary donations and a benefit performance filled 150 additional baskets under the auspices of the Junior Association of Commerce and The News-Journal.

Seventy-five baskets were supplied by the Salvation Army, 50 by the Volunteers of America; 36 by the American Legion; 54 by Mansfield Senior high school, and 23 by the Bowman school. Baskets in lesser numbers were supplied by other organizations.

The children in these cases were not forgotten as many groups and individuals included toys with baskets going to homes where there were children. Frank Mitsch led a drive for toys in the north section of the city and obtained a truck load to turn over to the Give-a-Christmas organization. All children, who are wards of the Richland county court in boarding homes, were also remembered.

Beginning at 7:30 p. m. today there will be services in 12 city churches. They include the annual Christmas eve Solemn High

Lightning Gleams On Yule Trimmings ---But Snow's Due

There was still a chance today that Santa Claus will have snow for his sleigh and reindeer when he arrives in Mansfield tonight, but the weatherman had his signals all mixed up and he wasn't sure.

A predicted drop in temperature was expected to turn rain to snow today, but the storm area has moved on and the snow will be light if it comes at all. The temperature was 40 at noon today and falling slowly.

Lighting flashed and thunder rumbled over the city last night as late shoppers took a ducking on downtown streets. The mercury was all the way up to 55 last night.

Showers last night and early today brought three-fourths of an inch of rainfall and most streams in the county were bank-full today. The rain and thousands of holiday shoppers combined last night to give the city one of its worst traffic jams in weeks.

Partly cloudy and colder weather was in prospect for tonight and Christmas day.

Manila Defense Forces Facing Grave Threat

Nipponese Land Troops From 40 Ships South of Capital as Stubborn Battle Rages In North Where Enemy Reinforcements Arrive.

BULLETIN

MANILA—(UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of U. S. forces in the Far East, took the field today, assuming personal command of American and Philippine forces combatting an all-out Japanese air and land assault against this capital and bastion of American defense in the Pacific.

(By Associated Press)

MANILA—The defenders of Manila, battling a Japanese invasion army 125 miles north of the capital, faced a grave threat from a new direction today as the enemy succeeded in landing heavy forces 75 miles southeast of the city from 40 transports which crept up during the night.

The new landing was effected at Atimonan, a small fishing port on the Luzon east coast.

A communique issued from U. S. army headquarters at 4 p. m. (2 a. m. EST) said that American and Filipino troops were "resisting stubbornly" on both fronts, but added ominously:

"The enemy continues to land reinforcements."

The official bulletin, which described fighting in both sectors as "very heavy," failed to say whether the invaders were making any progress toward Manila.

"Forty transports are off the coast at Atimonan," the communique declared. "Fighting is very heavy. United States armed forces of the Far East troops are behaving very well but are greatly outnumbered.

"There is very heavy fighting in the north. Our troops there are behaving admirably against great odds."

Word from Atimonan by telephone said several transport loads of Japanese landed under cover of heavy fire from the sea.

Observers here expressed the view, however, that the only dangerous Japanese landing so far was that along the Gulf of Lingayen northwest of Manila.

They said that the Japanese push from Legaspi on extreme southern Luzon had been stopped by blowing up bridges across deep ravines, and that the Japanese had made no advance from Aparri, in extreme northern Luzon, where the landing

TWO-PRONGED: Soviets Hurl Double Leningrad Assaults

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—Russia's northwestern army, gathering momentum despite stiffening German resistance, is hurling two attacking forces against massive enemy defense lines in a new drive to lift the 15-weeks' siege of Leningrad, Red army dispatches said today.

From the important city of Tikhvin, one force commanded by Gen. K. A. Meretskov drove westward 50 miles in sub-zero weather, piercing German barricades along the Volkhov river, strategic water barrier 70 miles from Leningrad connecting lakes Ladoga and Ilmen.

A supporting unit, heading northwestward from recaptured Chudovo, 75 miles from Leningrad, sought to trap the outer German lines around the industrial capital. Dispatches said this force already had crushed an entire German division in a pincer movement while regaining command of roads to Leningrad.

Meretskov was said to be directing a relentless attack, threatening the German fortifications along the Volkhov. The army organ Red Star said his troops yesterday recaptured 18 villages, bringing to 150 his total for 10 days.

Desperate German resistance and fierce counter-attacks failed to halt the Red army advance along the Moscow defense arc. A communique said strong attack units yesterday recaptured the key railway junction of Gorbachovo and neighboring Odoevo, 40 miles southwest of Tula.

Germany has rushed reserves—including Australians, Czechs, Hungarians and Finns—for renewed counter-attacks on the Mozhaisk salient of the Moscow front, scene of fierce fighting day and night, the communique said.

CONTRAST: Yule Lights Go Up As Chiefs Map Grim War Plan

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Bright colored lights were strung on a community Christmas tree in the south grounds of the White House today, almost under the windows of the historic Lincoln study where President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and the American-British war council plotted grim strategy to deal Hitlerism a final "external knockout blow."

Unpleasant news from the Pacific war front, where American and British forces are making a valiant stand against avalanching Japanese onslaughts, failed completely to dim a resolute victory spirit on this anniversary eve of the Saviour's birth.

This evening, in a "blackout," afforded only by the setting of the winter sun, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill will leave their conference table of war to broadcast to the anti-Axis world a message of holiday courage and cheer, and throw the switch that will illuminate Washington's particularly symbolic Yuletide tree.

President Roosevelt, in a personal Christmas message to the fighting men of the U. S. armed forces, summed up the conviction that was being translated into strategic action by American and British war leaders, when he said:

"I am confident that during the year which lies before us you will triumph on all fronts against the forces of evil which are arrayed against us."

Preparations for a heartfelt observance of Christmas failed, however, to deter the alert attention

BATTLE JAP PINCER MOVE NEAR MANILA

U. S. Forces Faced With Grave Threat as Japs Land More Troops on Luzon.

was intended apparently only to establish an air base.

Any Japanese thrust from Atimonan, these sources declared, could be stopped just as the Legaspi push was, by dynamiting vital bridges and blowing out sections of the road through the mountains.

As the new overland threat to Manila developed, army headquarters announced that military authorities were considering declaring the capital an open city to spare it from "any possible air or ground attacks." The announcement recalled that similar declarations were made with respect to Paris, Brussels, Athens, Rome "and other capitals" earlier in the war.

Disclosure that such a step was under consideration followed by several hours a mid-morning raid on the Manila port area by nine Japanese bombers—the first on that section since the beginning of hostilities.

Great clouds of black smoke rolled up from the waterfront as the Japanese planes swept away over Fort McKinley in the rain of steel from anti-aircraft guns. One of the raiders was officially reported downed and several others were believed destroyed.

The all clear was sounded in Manila after 15 minutes. Considerable damage apparently was done to buildings along the waterfront.

An army spokesman said that before landing at Atimonan the Japanese had made an attack on the southwest coast of the island near Batangas but had been driven off.

Observers here interpreted the new Japanese thrust as an attempt to force Gen. Douglas MacArthur to split his forces and thus weaken resistance on the vital northern front.

According to last reports the defenders there were holding a line north of Damortis, 120 miles from Manila, against the persistent hammering of strong Japanese forces which began landing from a fleet of 80 transports in the Gulf of Lingayen Sunday.

"Heavy fighting continues in the north, with the enemy exerting great pressure," said the morning communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

It failed to say whether the invaders, who were reported yesterday to be using light tanks in an attempt to fight their way southward, had been able to make any progress

An army spokesman, however, said the Japanese air force was attacking at many points, apparently in an attempt to blast the American lines of communication.

He disclosed that in one assault Japanese bombers had damaged the steel bridge at Vilasis, 30 miles south of Damortis on the main highway to Manila, but said that the damage already was being repaired

The landing at Atimonan is the sixth attempted by the Japanese on the island of Luzon since the war began Dec. 7 Places at which they have established beachheads include Legaspi, on the southernmost tip of Luzon 250 miles from Manila, Vigan, on the west coast 210 miles north of the capital, and Aparri on the extreme north coast

Atimonan, situated on Lopez bay on the narrow neck of land connecting the main portion of Luzon with the southern bulge is a town of about 13,000 known chiefly as a fishing center

The morning communique was silent concerning the situation at Davao on Mindanao island south of Luzon, where the Japanese also have landed in force.

Press reports quoted refugees from Mindanao, however as saying that seven Japanese troopships had been sunk in Davao harbor and that the defense forces were giving a good account of themselves in land fighting

A Filipino refugee who made his way to Manila from Legaspi said he had seen about 5,000 Japanese soldiers there and about 300 at Naga, the provincial capital

Hongkong Holds As Bombing Goes On

CHUNGKING —(INS)— With Chinese relief troops still trying to batter their way through Japanese lines to the crown colony Hongkong was still reported holding out today

A message received by official United States quarters in Chungking at noon (10 p m. Tuesday EST) said that Jap forces were still bombing and shelling the city.

At the same time, Governor Sir Mark Young of Hongkong reported "local success" for the British defenders in the southern sector of the island.

Jap Losses Heavy On Malaya Front

SINGAPORE —(UP)— British imperial troops, holding a front 40 miles wide and 20 miles deep on the west coast of Malaya, are inflicting terrific casualties on Japanese troops who are attacking in massed waves in a new offensive, dispatches from the front said today

Japanese shock troops were reported advancing in the face of direct artillery, rifle and machine gun fire in an attempt, so far vain, to break the British line and capture the key town of Ipoh, 285 miles north of Singapore.

Entire waves of Japanese troops were being wiped out by concentrated fire of empire forces, dispatches said, but the enemy continued to attack without cessation.

Chinese Capture Vital Rail Point

CHUNGKING — (U.P.) — Chinese forces have captured Namling, 50 miles north of Hongkong on the important Kowloon-Canton railway, the official Chinese news agency said today.

Namling is the next big station north of Shumchun on the Kowloon-Canton railway. It was taken Monday by Chinese troops waging an offensive against Japanese forces on the mainland opposite Hongkong. The Chinese attacks were designed to relieve Japanese pressure on the British Crown colony.

Report Sinking of Four Jap Ships

LONDON —(INS)— A tremendous attack on Japanese warships off the coast of Sarawak, North Borneo, in which three large troop transports and one tanker already have been sunk, was announced officially in London today.

The announcement said:

"Japanese warships off the coast of Sarawak are being attacked by sea and air

"Three large troop transports and one tanker have been sunk by Allied forces."

EUROPE WAITS HITLER MOVE

Troop Movements, Resignation of Petain Rumored; London Doubts Reports.

figuring in speculation over Germany's next move.

Advices in Berne, Switzerland, yesterday said German troops were moving through occupied France to join previously collected Nazi contingents on the Spanish border. Istanbul reports said Germans there had been advised by their embassy to be ready to close their businesses "for a short time" in January.

Behind Petain's reported resignation lay an agreement generally believed here to have been forced from him by Reichs Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering at St. Florentin, Dec 1. At that time Petain allegedly promised the Germans all the bases they wanted in French Africa provided these could be reached without using interned remnants of the French fleet. Since then Petain has been pictured as stalling the Germans. Because he wanted to judge the outcome of the British-Libyan offensive

Success of that offensive, which British say may soon drive the German armies in North Africa to the Tunisian border, is believed by observers here to have caused Berlin to put extreme pressure upon France to open a back-door of escape as well as an avenue of supplies to the German troops in Libya.

That the Germans may have declined to operate in French North Africa with or without French consent and that Petain resigned by way of an ineffectual protest is one hypothesis advanced here.

the president and Mr. Churchill gave to an admittedly grave crisis confronting Britain and the United States in the Far East.

The newly formed joint war council was agreed that the might of both nations shall be joined in a complete unity of action against the Japanese.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill made this announcement even as Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported from the Philippines that a major Japanese landing operation, under cover of increasing air and sea activity had been able to send light tanks against the U. S.-Filipino forces stubbornly defending the land path to Manila.

Prime Minister Churchill, with the president nodding vigorous agreement, added that the British intend to defend the great Pacific naval base of Singapore and its approaches so vigorously that eventually a general offensive may be started against Japan.

The Far East was the immediate concern of the White House conferees, but Churchill pointed out that war today is being waged in almost every section of the world with a ferocity unparalleled in history.

The Roosevelt-Churchill combination paid special tribute to the manner in which Premier Josef Stalin's Russian armies are smashing the Germans into a virtual rout over the entire European western front.

Prime Minister Churchill sardonicaly suggested that the Nazis had suffered such a severe rebuff from the Russians that even though they fall back far enough to find a place for the winter they won't find it comfortable.

Carol frowned in perplexity as she pulled on her gloves.

"I want to see him, too. But I believe it may be just as well if he doesn't know that I was here this morning. You understand, don't you?"

"I guess you might be right."

"I'll arrange to see you later ...when we can make plans." Charlie, too." She bent and kissed Amanda lightly on the cheek.

"There ain't no use trying to tell you how I feel, Carol But I'll do everything the way you want."

"That will be fine. Goodbye."

It was not far from noon when Carol entered the office and was gratified to find the doctor in.

"Well, I'm back," she announced gaily. "I drove my car and didn't run over a single person, too!"

"You look in exceptional spirits," Silverthorne said, "I'm almost wondering if you found another job already."

"No But I have one for you, please Will you write to the man at Siloam and ask him how soon he can accommodate a new patient? The time is more important than the money"

"Sounds preposterous," he grunted. "They're well endowed ...no use letting them think we're bloated But I'll write at once" He pulled meditatively at his goatee "It's a very fine thing you're doing, my girl, and I hope you'll have the particular reward you desire"

"It's to see Charlie better or well" she answered quickly.

"Of course And I assume all the negotiations and whatnot are sub rosa?"

"Oh, they must be! Charlie doesn't even suspect"

"I see. It's a sad thing to have so little faith in one's fellows, but I think I may as well mail my letter in that case from Centertown. I'm obliged to go there this afternoon to consult with Rodgers regarding one of his patients. Perhaps 'console' would be a better word from what he told me over the phone."

"Thank you ever so much, Doctor I think I will go to the shop now and give my father a lift home, if he will trust himself to me...And I'll stay in the office all afternoon I promise"

"Oh, by the way. Do you see young Patty Garver frequently?"

"I can."

"She has no phone You might ask her to drop in to see me in the morning She was the first to apply for your position I may give her a trial though I suspect I will be tempted to operate on her vocal chords"

"I know that she will be glad to come," Carol laughed.

She was still smiling to herself at Silverthorne's remark when she descended the stairs and started walking rapidly to the little tailor shop The wind had come up strongly and she was obliged to walk with her head bent against it - When she reached her father's door she flung it open. Andy's form was silhouetted against a rear window

"Hi, there!" she called breathlessly. 'Want a ride home?'

"Hello," said a voice that wasn't Andy's. Carol turned with a start. It was Chester Dennison sitting in a chair tipped back against the wall He rose to his feet and took off his hat with a smile.

There was frank admiration in the gray eyes scanning the slim wind-blown figure in front of him

Andre Delaine hastened to Carol's rescue when he realized her embarrassment at being confronted suddenly by Dennison whom she had not noticed in her hurried entrance

"Of course I want to ride home," he declared, "and I'm ready to start Chet was leaving, anyway He just dropped in to say he believed he'd like to have Amos and me teach him three-handed pinochle and he'd be around tomorrow evening If I was going to be home," he added with a slight accent on the pronoun.

"That's right," Dennison said cheerfully. "I really was on the point of leaving I'll be seeing you soon I hope"

With that, he smiled and departed

"Andy, you look guilty," his daughter said when they were alone. "Are you trying to make things worse for me than they are?"

"So help me, no. Chet did suggest coming over tomorrow night and he did mention pinochle. I couldn't very well refuse, could I?"

"I suppose not."

"You don't have to put in an appearance unless you like. But of course it will be friendly of you to show up . . . under the circumstances and all."

"I'll see"

When they reached home Carol announced she would put the car in the barn as she did not intend to use it during the afternoon.

"Leave her out front, if you don't mind," Andy suggested unexpectedly. "I may give myself a lesson. Agamemnon Filiates, my Greek understudy, hung around this morning for a bit and I told him he could come back this afternoon He's going to worm his way into my business. At least, I'll take things a little easier while he's learning the ropes"

Before she went to the office again Carol relayed Silverthorne's message to Patty Garver. The young woman was delighted.

"So you did decide to leave after all, darling!" she said. "I'm glad to get a chance at the job though I don't suppose it pays a fortune But it's a heap better than nothing and I'm ever so grateful, really. Tell the doctor I'll be on hand tomorrow morning and not to dare let anybody else get ahead of me!"

Erasmus did not seem overly enthused when his prospective office girl appeared. He merely requested Carol to acquaint Miss Garver with some of the details and routine—give her a chance to see whether she liked it That meant introducing Patty to the "alive" and the "dead" cards and, for some reason, Carol found herself resentful at her friend's delighted exploration of the pasteboards The name of nearly every patient recalled some bit of gossip, she was particularly critical of certain delinquents who certainly should be able to pay their delayed doctor bills, what with the cars they drove and the clothes they wore It was a shame

"Doctor Silverthorne will tell you," Carol explained uneasily, "but of course all these records are very confidential. He's strict about that"

"Oh, sure! I understand Mum's the word But it's fun to know about them With all these new people coming to town this should be a good place to meet some of them I was just thinking this morning I'd have myself some cute little uniforms Not like a nurse's of course, but something I'm too dumb to pass for a nurse, but it won't hurt to give the impression, will it?"

"No"

"I'm going to love it. Having some place to go to every day and have people to talk to It was swell of you, Carol." She lowered her voice to a roguish undertone "Maybe I can get your old fellow along with your job! I've been hearing things . . ."

"Have you?" Carol returned coolly "There's no telling Before I forget it, the blank cards are in this pigeonhole Doctor wants one filled out for each patient he sees If they have to wait, that's a good time to do it. He has a way of forgetting Since he's out for a little while, I'd better show you about some things inside office"

After supper, alone in her room, Carol was provoked to find herself half-anticipating and half-dreading the sound of the door bell that would mean Chester Dennison's arrival She didn't want to see him, yet she was not inclined to hide. He might think she was afraid or was trying to act coy. She would have to go downstairs of course, but she would take her time about it and be perfectly cool. Luckily there would be safety in numbers and the guest was coming to see Andy, anyway. She would make it a point of escaping before the party broke up, see to it that she was not maneuvered into being left alone with her new suitor. She waited until a steady sound of conversation in the dining-room told that the lesson was on, then she entered.

"Good evening," was her greeting "How is the game going?" She was rather annoyed that Chester got to his feet at once It was a very proper thing to do no doubt, but it seemed a little out of place since Amos and Andy remained seated.

"Everything is splendid," Dennison assured her "All but the pupil. He's a loss"

"Oh, you're doing fine, young fellow," Amos insisted 'Sit down."

Carol drew a chair close to Mrs Steel's rocker Aunt Cassie had been present from the start, contributing her portion of the conversation between hands. And sometimes oftener.

"I was just going to tell Andre when you came in, Carol," she said "about that woman moving in the Hutchins place today Elsie says you never saw such a lot of furniture as they took out of the biggest van she ever laid eyes on. All new, mind you Beds, dressers, chairs to no end She says all the beds were the single kind"

"Which vastly relieved her I don't doubt," Andy murmured It his sister heard the remark, which brought chuckles of amusement from the other two players, she chose to ignore it.

"And that wasn't all That woman, mind you, stood out on the porch and bossed the unloading. And she had on a sweater and a pair of pants like a man's! Her name's Mrs Corwin and she . . ."

"Cassandra I beg of you!" It was Andy again 'They were slacks!'

"That sounds right enough. But they were nothing for her to be wearing in broad daylight Disgraceful . . . with a figure like Elsie says"

"Now I will be heard!" Andre exclaimed, riffling the cards he held in his hands. "I don't intend to let anybody pull a Trojan horse on me! Tell me, Carol, do women have their slacks pressed?"

"I would think so," she laughed "But I'm not exactly an authority I've never owned a pair"

"My usual luck," he said bitterly, and flipped four cards at Amos

Aunt Cassie continued telling the news in a lowered voice to Carol and the two of them started some time later when Dennison slapped the table with a despairing laugh

"It's hopeless!" he exclaimed ruefully "My mind's a fog of melds and sequences And what's more, I'm hungry. Wait," he cautioned, as Mrs. Steel started to rise with a look of consternation on her usually placid face. "Here's the plot. The delicatessen has a fresh lot of Cheddar on hand and if there's anything I like better than Cheddar cheese, it's more of it. I'm going to run down and get some for sandwiches You're going with me, Miss Carol. So get your coat. We won't be gone but a minute."

Carol sat transfixed. She knew it was a plot. Andy was smiling to himself while Amos grinned broadly at her. In a sort of daze she heard Aunt Cassie say:

"That's all right, Mr Dennison, but don't you lug home any of that nasty beer I'll have coffee made by the time you get back, or pretty nearly. I'll stir up the fire" She left hurriedly for the kitchen

Carol bit her lip and rose to her feet If she refused, it would look too transparent. If only Mr. Dennison didn't have that authoritative manner. He expected everybody to do as he said . . . usually. She met his smiling eyes with a level gaze.

"My coat is in the hall," she said quietly.

"Funny thing," Chester remarked when the car was under way, "but I must have been born without card sense I like an occasional easy game, but when it means work I hate it Do you play bridge?"

"No"

"I'm so glad When I was growing up . . . on vacations and all that . . . my mother and sisters browbeat me into learning enough about the game to fill in for their edification. I always associate bridge with being bawled out by my friends and getting dirty looks from strangers"

* * *

He had no more to say until he came out of the delicatessen with a supply of refreshments. "Me and my Cheddar," he laughed, placing the parcels on the seat at Carol's side Her heart sank a little as she noticed how slowly they were traveling after the first intersection was crossed. Something warned her that her escort was about to say something that might prove disastrous to her composure. Which he proceeded to do

"Have I been a pretty good boy tonight?" he demanded "So far?"

"So far"

"But you think I may have pulled a low trick on you now"

"I'm afraid I hadn't thought much about it."

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1941.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you: You shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men. —St. Luke. II, 8-14.

Another War-Time Christmas

CHRISTMAS, with its message of peace and goodwill, comes to a world that has, through two thousand years, given little heed to teachings which would have made possible a much more rapid approach to the ideals for which it stands.

Not since that fateful December in 1917, when America was in the midst of the first World war, has there been a Christmas when emotions were so mixed and the future so uncertain as now.

America is again at war, honorably aligned against a vast military force which is attempting to destroy the things we hold most dear—human freedom, religious liberty and the privilege of self government.

Except in homes where sorrow has already come as a result of war, and in those from which some loved one is absent because of his country's call, this Christmas in America will not be unlike many that have gone before. There will be decorated trees, giving of presents, family dinners, brilliant illumination, and at least an outward show of gaiety and good cheer.

But close in the background of thought there will be a realization of the grim tasks that lie immediately ahead, and of the work that must be done within the coming year to assure America, the Western Hemisphere, and the entire world a brighter Christmas-time in 1942 than now exists.

While war may be seized upon by skeptics as justification for their doubt, it also serves to awaken and strengthen faith of millions of people in the eternal truths of religion, and in the eventual sure triumph of right over wrong.

The United States of America, and the principles upon which this nation was founded and has progressed for a century and a half, represent the finest application of high ideals in human relationships that has ever been reached on earth—and this is based on teachings that have come down through the centuries from the Babe of Bethlehem, the Man of Galilee, whose birth is commemorated by Christmas observance.

When the spirit of Christmas can be brought to all the world, as it is found now in the hearts of those who realize its true significance, and conform their lives to the principles and practices it sets forth, the causes of war will have vanished from the earth and there will be reality in what now seems ironic: "Peace on earth, goodwill among men."

Drunken Driving as Accident Cause

REVELATION that a high percentage of accidents and fatalities on the "bloody six miles" of Route 42 between Mansfield and Ashland are attributed to drunken driving occasions no surprise among observers of the speed and recklessness of some of the drivers on that highway.

The problem, it appears, as suggested by Prosecuting Attorney Lutz, is one of more policing on that section of road, and sterner restraint of persons accustomed to driving after drinking intoxicants.

Traffic officers, safety workers, judges, hospital attendants and physicians agree that the greatest single menace in modern traffic is the person who thinks he "can drive just as well after he's had a few drinks as when he's cold sober"—and preparations are now being made to cope with the annual plague of drunken driving which has become an apparently inescapable part of Christmas and New Year celebrations by liquor addicts.

Scattering of liquor sales places into rural sections has complicated the enforcement problem to such an extent that adequate policing is probably impossible. A determined policy of revoking driving licenses of persons who are known to drive after drinking may prove more effective, together with continuance of efforts to impress school children, and older people, with the danger of driving after drinking.

Many Young Boys In Civil War

FROM various parts of the country, within the past couple of weeks, reports have come about boys around the age of 12 years trying to enlist in either the army or navy, and newspapers have played up these incidents as "human interest stories" instead of "straight news."

There has been discussion in congress, and elsewhere, about minimum draft age—and this has finally been fixed at 20—unless future needs necessitate a change, which now seems unlikely, as the present army of a million and three-quarters men could be doubled within a few months by drawing from registrants not yet called, with another million reaching the age of 21 during the year ending next July. Estimates place the potential army, within present age ranges, at about five million men.

While many have realized that some "mere boys" served in the Civil war, revelations in Pearson and Allen's Merry-Go-Round column yesterday were rather startling. They found that 104,987 Union soldiers in the Civil war were under 15 years of age; 1,523 under 14 and 300 under 13, while 38 drummers and buglers were between 10 and 11 years old and 25 were under 10.

A well-remembered local instance of youthful service in the Civil war was that of the late George Knofflock, long-time chief of the Mansfield fire department, who, after several attempts, succeeded in enlisting as a private when he was 14 years old, having been mustered into service in this city.

Some other countries, particularly Germany and Italy, are still calling boys of tender years to military service but it is tribute to Americans that, only as a last resort, will they permit the horrors of war to encroach on the childhood of this nation.

This is an ideal time of year to give the Golden Rule a tryout in your own neighborhood.

"—And Lo, the Angel of the Lord Came Upon Them"

"—And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke II 9-15.

Help Us Remember!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

(My friends, always it has been the happiest part of my year, writing this Christmas letter to you. But what can I say today? What courage can I give you—or what joy—when I have so little myself? I will not give sugared substitutes. That's out. But this I do know . . . this I have truly found . . . this I can honestly give you for our mutual heartening. No matter how victorious Evil may seem when you read these words, that victory will not last. For there is a force greater than Brutality. There is a power greater than Hate or Greed. There is an answer more lasting than Lies. That answer was here the night that Christ was born . . . it flamed in a Star, in a Song. That answer is here today. It can never be conquered. It will never go away. God help you to remember that today.—Elsie.)

IT WAS BLACK, up there on the hills, when they'd bedded the flock. No comfort, even at the best, but tonight the darkness was heavy with searing cold. Sour as a man's dead dreams, the oldest shepherd thought, scuffling the meager fire. Even the starveling sheep, crowding against him, blatting in their misery, felt a strangeness in the night.

Below, where rocky slopes gave way to cobbled lanes and flat-topped roofs, the lights still flared and drunken laughter blurted: But Bethlehem was crammed that night with subject tribes who'd come to pay their tax to Rome.

Crammed, too, with all the hate and greed such taxes breed. So, while the rich men revelled with their dancing girls, the plotters fawned and whispered . . . beggars brawled . . . and many sprawled in gutters, wrapped in rags. . . . And two, it's said, sought refuge in a stable where the cattle fed—a weary girl, a gentle, bearded man.

But neither brawls nor laughter moved the shivering shepherds on the hills. Old stuff, this everlasting fight between the weak and strong, as ruthless and as brutal as the warring wolves, and as incurable. And so they merely muttered as they'd always done, their eyes as hopeless as so many stones. And beat their hands against their chilblained shins . . . and chewed their bitter bread. . . .

Then gasped, as someone shouted!

There, ahead, above the distant stable where there'd been blank night, a Star had bloomed! A great, white Star . . . that lit the arching darkness. And suddenly within its glow, a vast winged throng that, as they watched, burst into joyous song!

"Glory to God!" the angels sang. "Glory to God!" their chorus rang. "And, on this earth, good will and peace toward men! For unto you is born this day—a saving Friend!"

"Good will toward men . . ?" The shaking shepherds stared. How long since anyone had dared that wish? "Good will and peace . . .?" Their eyes were wide with wonder as the great chant ceased . . . their lips went stiff with fright. Why had this marvel come to them on such a night—and was it true? Could beaten men still find a friend . . . begin anew? Was this the Sign, this Star, so white and still? They started . . . whispering hoarsely . . . stumbling down, until—

THEY FOUND THE CHILD!

Help us remember, Father, that sweet miracle those shepherds watched upon their lonely hill. Help us to know the truth they learned that weary night—

No heart's so empty
But it holds a Song—
No night's so hopeless
But there shines—
A Star!

The Brightest Star

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

High over all it shines, the star,
The brightest star. Look up
Oh, men, behold the radiant light
Held in the sky's far cup.

Bring it close to you, let it warm
Your heart in these bleak days
Run red with blood and bitterness
In pain's dark, bitter maze

A Christmas star, the very words
Have peace for every woe.
But pitiful, men will not heed
It, blind with greed they go.

O, may it shine, the Christmas star,
Earth's fairest, brightest gem,
In every heart as brightly as
In ancient Bethlehem.

War Changes White House Fete, All Roosevelt Sons In Service

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Every year, Christmas in the White House has been a source of interest and inspiration to the rest of the country. This has been especially true when the large Roosevelt family, five children—we have lost count of the grandchildren—gather for the holidays.

Almost every Christmas, Anna Boettinger, the president's eldest daughter, and her family have come all the way from Seattle. Franklin, jr., and his wife, the former Ethel duPont, have come up from Virginia; and the young John Roosevelts have come down from Boston, filling the White House until its many rooms were overflowing.

On Christmas morning the entire family, especially the grandchildren, gathered in the President's bedroom, where the children hung their stockings on the mantel the night before. And from that moment until night there has been more pandemonium per inch in the White House than in all the heterogeneous, far-flung agencies of the New Deal put together.

But this Christmas will be different from any that dignified old mansion has seen since the days of Abraham Lincoln and the War Between the States.

Outside the front windows, steam shovels and concrete mixers are chewing up the lawn, on which the gardener worked so hard to keep green, in order to dig a bomb-proof shelter. A huge wooden fence screens the operations from public view, but to one inside the White House it is a grim reminder of the fact that the country is at war, that the president himself is under danger of attack.

And around the south lawn, the little wooden sentry boxes in which the White House police stand at night, have been increased until there are guards every twenty paces.

In War Service.

MEANWHILE, the Roosevelt children are scattered around the world—all the boys in war service. Jimmie, a captain of Marines, is at San Diego. Franklin, jr., when last heard from was stationed in Iceland. John is an ensign in the navy. Elliott is with the air corps.

So, about the only thing normal about this year's Christmas is Mrs. Roosevelt's shopping and she took pains to do that long ago before there was any thought of a Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Beginning even last January, Mrs. Roosevelt had done her Christmas shopping as she went—pottery from a wayside stand in New England; baskets from a New York school for the blind; neckties from a benefit sale for an orphange in Dutchess county; pewter and hand-wrought iron from her own Val Kill shop; furniture from the mountaineer handicraft shop in Reedsville, W. Va.; and rugs or embroidery from Berea college, Kentucky.

So, war or no war, Mrs. Roosevelt's friends will receive their Christmas presents.

Regarding the other festivities which highlight the usual White House Christmas, the most inspiring is the president's rendition of Dickens' Christmas Carol which he usually reads to the family with much gusto. This year when friends called the White House to ask if the president would read the Christmas Carol, they were told that he would go through with this cherished family ritual even though the children were away.

"To whom will he read it?" came the question.

"To Mrs. Roosevelt, I suppose."

News Censor Price.

BYRON PRICE, dapper Associated Press executive, owes his appointment as wartime censor to two old newspaper friends, now big-shot presidential advisers.

One was White House secretary Steve Early, a one-time AP man who worked under Price; the other was Lowell Mellett, former Scripps-Howard newspaper editor and a colleague of Price's in the Gridiron club.

Inside fact is that the president turned over the job of recommending a wartime censor to a three-man cabinet committee — Vice President Wallace, Attorney General Biddle and Postmaster General Walker. But while they were considering a number of possibilities, Early and Mellett, joining forces, persuaded the president that Price was his man.

The cabinet committee didn't know about this until they were told Price had been selected.

In picking Price, the president turned down two outstanding newspaper men. One, Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News & Observer, was favored by the president personally, but the objection was raised that Daniels wasn't "well-known enough."

This seems peculiar, because Daniels besides being the son of Josephus Daniels, ex-secretary of the navy and until recently ambassador to Mexico, also is author of two best sellers and a regular contributor to a number of leading magazines. There isn't a newspaperman in the country who doesn't know who Jonathan Daniels is.

The other ace newsman passed over was Ulric Bell, crusading Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, another great southern paper. Bell, it was contended, didn't have "sufficient executive experience."

This also seemed strange, since Bell, almost single-handed, organized and directed Fight For Freedom, Inc., which, on a shoestring, waged a slashing nation-wide fight against the lavishly financed America First committee and its numerous franking privilege supporters in congress.

Domestic Censorship?

DURING the senate debate on the War Prosecution act, Senator Arthur Vandenberg inquired whether he understood correctly that the censorship section in the bill "applies only to the transmission of communications between the United States and any foreign country, and that there is nothing in the bill which involves censorship of any form of national communication or publication in the United States."

To this, Senator Fred Van Nuys, chairman of the judiciary committee, replied: "The senator from Michigan is entirely correct. That subject was threshed out in detail with Attorney General Biddle, all members of the committee participating. There is in the bill not a word which would authorize the president to exercise censorship over newspapers or messages within the United States. The provision deals wholly with outgoing messages from America to foreign countries."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I see the kids coming out of the recruiting stations, their eyes lit by an inner light, their heads adorned with a sort of spiritual cockade as they get ready, cheerfully, for the dirty business at hand.

I see the older men on the street corners, in the restaurants and on the subways and ferryboats, dangerously determined, their eyes touched by a cold anger as they privately and collectively re-examine their articles of faith and prepare for the things that are ahead.

And I think, "This is good. This is pretty swell. It's the way it ought to be. I haven't seen anybody who was afraid, not even when the first air raid warnings came. But then, when you think about it, what other reaction would be possible of men whose granddaddies were the Bowery boys and the Texas panhandlers and the Georgia planters and the Pennsylvania farmers who saw Shiloh and who were at Gettysburg and Cold Harbor?"

Times change, and wars with them, but not the mettle of the men who come out of the Kansas wheatfields or the Virginia valleys.

I'LL show you what I mean. I'll take you back to a day at Kennesaw Mountain, where you can see it plain, where something old and courtly existed on both sides and still remains in the kids of today who are ready to go to war with a shout.

On Kennesaw Mountain, that day the Confederates were heavily entrenched. When the Federals came against them, they came with their battleflags flying. The big guns on both sides began to chew at the opposing forces. And then something happened that I am going to let Stanley F. Horn describe for you. Mr. Horn is a Tennesseean and a historian. He lives on Golf Club Lane, in Nashville. On page 336 of his great biography of "The Army of Tennessee," he says.

"TO ADD to the terrors of the battle, the woods caught fire and some of the Federal wounded were burned horribly as they lay helplessly exposed to the twin dangers of incineration and death from the cross fire of the opposing armies. Colonel W. H. Martin, of the 1st Arkansas, Cleburne's division, appalled at their ghastly plight, tied a handkerchief to a ramroad, and, leaping to the parapet, offered a truce.

"'We won't fire a gun until you get them away,' he yelled to the foemen huddled behind the protecting rocks and fallen trees only a few yards away, 'but be quick!' The Federals, of course, gladly accepted the chance to save their wounded from the fire, and before the truce was ended a Federal major, in appreciation of Colonel Martin's generous gesture, presented him his brace of fine pistols."

I ask you now, have we anything to fear when our armed forces are manned by the sons of men like that?

Fine for the Boy Scouts.

Waite Phillips, Tulsa oil man, has done a fine thing in his magnificent gifts to the Boy Scouts of America. The New Mexico ranches will give the Scouts a wonderful opportunity to be trained in the out-of-door life of the pioneers whose resourceful energy built a civilization in the wilderness. Presumably the office building in Tulsa included in the gift will provide the necessary endowment for running expenses.

It is difficult to make great bequests without lessening the self-reliance of the recipients. To avoid this danger many givers have turned to educational or medical endowments. A sound body is the ideal that has come down to us from ancient times. This ideal is furthered by promoting public education and public health.

Mr. Phillips has combined both objectives in his gift. For he hopes it will train boys mentally and physically for living. Wisdom as well as public spirit are embodied in his generosity.—Kansas City Star.

A Farmer's Diary

Great-Uncle Malachi

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ONE DAY I went with Great-uncle Malachi to plow the bottom field. I was just a small barefoot boy. He was white of hair and beard, and he drove the old gray mare teamed up with a three-year-old colt, "just to wear the colt down a bit, before time for spring work in earnest."

Some granite boulders were loose upon the surface, and every time the old mare came to one she would stop, expecting that he would roll the stone away, as was always the custom among the Pennsylvania Dutch farmers of our valley. The mare walked in the furrow, guided easily by one line, but the prancing colt beside her was a worry. He plunged and capered and made things hard for the patient old lead horse.

Suddenly a sharp brier sprang back against the colt's breast and clung. He began to kick. He didn't stop until he had reduced both single and double trees to kindling. Uncle Malachi had only the one line to guide by—and kept pulling the horses around a circle. When finally the colt stopped, and stood trembling, the old man went to its head and spoke soothingly. I remember admiring him that he spoke so calmly—"Looks like we'll have to take this team in and get new equipment," was all he said.

We led the horses toward home. "Sometimes a colt'll teach us moren' we can train into it," the old man told me. "He's only an animal and he'll be no better than the training we give him. Ugly words and harsh treatment ruin both horse and driver. Besides there aren't any words that fit at such a time."

Shortly afterward twenty hogs got out one night and nearly ruined a 15-acre field of knee-high corn. Gloom was written on Uncle's face that morning—but he kept his consistent silence. "Mebbe if you'd say something, you'd feel better, Malachi," I remember Aunt Rhoda told him. But he only shook his head and said, "No—better not! No man's tongue can keep up with a drove o' hogs."

But the time I remember best of all was once when an irate neighbor became violently abusive with his tongue because of Uncle Malachi's stand on a public question. Great-uncle Malachi heard him through without a word—then, with a twinkle in his eye, he called the man by name . . . "Si—don't you know 'twould take an intelligent man to really make me mad — but if he was, he wouldn't?"

CANADA, U. S. COMBINE FOR WAR EFFORT

Plan To Remove Tariffs, All Other Barriers Approved In Washington, Ottawa.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt has approved a plan for combining all the productive resources of Canada and the United States and for removing "any barriers" standing in the way of an "all-out war production effort."

A declaration of policy unanimously adopted by the joint war production committees of the two countries said that to fulfill such a plan legislative and administrative barriers, including tariffs, import duties, customs and other regulations and restrictions, "should be suspended or otherwise eliminated for the duration of the war."

"This declaration has met the approval of the Canadian war cabinet," Mr. Roosevelt said. "It has my full approval."

The plan apparently would combine not only the productive facilities but the raw materials of the two countries—even to the extent of breaking down tariff walls and other monetary restrictions.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had instructed the chairman of the American Joint War Production committee, Milo Perkins, to investigate, with the aid of the tariff commission and other government agencies, "the extent to which legislative changes will be necessary to give full effect to the declaration."

The plan was revealed as Mr. Roosevelt began consultations with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill on a joint plan of action seeking defeat of "Hitlerism." The Canadian prime minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, will join the discussions at the White House today or tomorrow.

Technicolor Romance.

Teamed together for the first time on the screen, Jeanette MacDonald and her husband in real life, Gene Raymond, play the sweethearts in the immortal romance, "Smilin' Through," now a Technicolor production, showing at the Ohio. Miss MacDonald appears as Moonyean, the early heroine in the story, and later as Moonyean's modern niece, Kathleen, who falls in love with the son of the man who brought about the untimely death of her aunt. Raymond plays the jealous suitor in the first romance and the suitor's son in the second. Brian Aherne plays Sir John Carteret, Moonyean's lover. Miss MacDonald sings nine ballads in the picture.

The odyssey of Jackie Cooper from a moppet to a full-fledged adult star is recalled by "Glamour Boy," Cooper's comedy attraction at the Madison. One of the kid players to survive the so-called awkward age in films, Cooper appears as a one-time child star forced to become a soda-jerker when his public tires of him. Now he stages a come-back with the aid of a kid wizard of radio is hilariously told in the comedy that also features little Darryl Hickman, Ann Gillis and Susanna Foster. Penny Singleton is featured in "Go West, Young Lady," the co-feature.

Musical Show.

"Lady Be Good," filmization of the popular Broadway musical comedy, opens Christmas at the Ritz with Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern and Robert Young in the starring roles. Miss Sothern and Young appear as a song-writing team who separate when success goes to the latter's head while Miss Powell enacts the dancing medium who brings them together. "Death Valley Outlaws," is the second picture.

Homespun Drama.

"Tuxedo Junction," starring the Weaver Brothers and Elviry at the Park theater, is an earthy, homespun comedy drama, showing how a far-sighted family dealt with the problem of juvenile delinquency. The Weavers operate a truck farm in California next to a millionaire estate which is resentful of being over-run by "hoodlums" and takes steps to eliminate them. How the "truckers" prove a match for their wealthy neighbors is humorously depicted by a cast that includes Lorna Gray and several of the "Dead End Kids." Leon Erroll is featured in "Hurry, Charlie Hurry," the second film.

Christmas Special.

"Man Hunt," will be shown at the Majestic theater Christmas day only. Walter Pidgeon and George Sanders are featured. "Buzzy and the Phantom Pinto," is the second attraction.

ORIGIN OF CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS TOLD

Mrs. Boyd Wierman Describes Use of Mistletoe, Holly and Christmas Tree In Ancient and Modern Times For Art Study Club.

"Traditional Christmas Decorations" was the title of an interesting paper presented by Mrs. Boyd Wierman at a recent meeting of the Art Study club at the Women's club. Mrs. Weirman revealed that the pagans originated the principal decorations as a means of protection against evil spirits, of which they lived in constant fear. Modern people use them only as ornaments.

Mistletoe, one of the oldest decorations, comes from the Britons and Gauls. It is a parasite which grows on many kinds of trees. Mrs. Wierman pointed out that mistletoe dates back to the time of the Druids, who regarded it as sacred. They cut it in true ceremonial fashion with a golden knife and hung it over the windows and doors of their homes, to propitiate the woodland deities. It was believed that only happiness could enter under the mistletoe, thus this belief gave rise to the ancient custom of "stealing a kiss" beneath its branches.

Another belief long existent in England, according to Mrs. Wierman, is that the mistletoe was once a fair tree in the forest, and from its wood was made the cross on which Christ was crucified For this reason, it was cursed and henceforth doomed to be only a humble parasite.

In England in early times the holly was made into wreaths and placed in windows and doors to keep away the evil spirits. Like the mistletoe, holly also is associated with Christ. According to very old tradition, it composed the crown of thorns which he wore and drops of blood were formed into little red berries.

The Romans decked their heroes with laurel as an emblem of victory, but the early Christians made wreaths of it to symbolize the joy and peace of Christmas and to indicate that Christ had entered their homes At their winter "Feast of the Yule," the Scandinavians kindled large bonfires in honor of their god Thor, to frighten away the evil spirits of darkness.

In Christian England, Mrs. Wierman continued, the yule log, which was substituted for the bonfire, was brought into the castle with ceremony, accompanied by music and lighted with a brand saved from the log of the previous year. While the bonfires of the Druids were dedicated to the sun, the yule log of the Christians was burned in honor of Him who is the "Light of the World."

Among present-day Christmas decorations, the tree holds first place Mrs. Wierman pointed out that most families "would not think of omitting it" from their decorations. She said that one of the earliest and best legends of the Christmas tree represents Luther trying to explain to his wife and children the beauty of a snow-covered forest under the glittering, star-lit sky. To make his words clear he went into his garden, cut off a little fir tree, took it into the house and put lighted candles on it. Thus was begun the custom of having a Christmas tree.

At the conclusion of her talk, Mrs. Wierman presented each member with a small branch of mistletoe which had been gathered for her by her brother in Knoxville, Tenn.

Prettiness Is Sometimes Over-Played

By MME. QUI VIVE

Good looks are a blessing, no doubt about it. They are a passport that gets you places. Beauty is an exquisite commodity—a composition of graceful lines, lovely coloring, charming manners, endearing personality. Few of us strike that high note. Prettiness is something else. It is what the high school girl glories in, some of the older girls too. It it often overdone. You know to whom we refer. Those fluffy dollies, with gaga eyes and melting, buttery smiles. Always glancing in mirrors. Assuming poses. Turning sidewise if they happen to have good profiles, so as to give your eye a treat. Ever conscious of appearance, seeking admiration, feeding their souls with vanity. Well, they don't suit the times.

Real, regular, old shoe girls get my vote. They go in for smart clothes, take exquisite pains to lay on the synthetic complexion, carry the chic coiffure. But when they get themselves together, they're through. Appearance is not the only subject that engages their thoughts and attention.

They seek a kind of beauty that is far-reaching. Character, disposition, intelligence must be considered and included.

Vanity leads a girl in the wrong direction, sometimes directly away from the beauty goal. In an endeavor to look even prettier she is likely to use too much makeup, shadow the natural complexion with cosmetic batik. She may overdress, use too many ornaments. She's sure to stick to her thin soles and spikes, no matter if a blizzard is blowing.

The regular girl dresses suitably for each occasion. In bad weather she tucks herself into a practical, warm coat, puts on a simple hat, wears walking shoes. She knows that if she does not look comfortable she will not look her best. Also, she has respect for the laws of health, realizing that without vitality, she is bound to look washed out and washed up. Vanity may be soul satisfying, but that's about all a girl gets out of it.

Miss Vanity may fancy that a pot of gold exchanged for costly raiment is all that she needs to make the beauty grade. Lovely clothes are nice to have, as every woman knows. They make one happy to a certain extent. But they are only the cream and the trimmings, for beauty is what you are, plus the sartorial luggage.

Expensive dry goods don't mean a thing unless you know how to wear lovely duds with splendor. And it isn't how much a frock costs as much as its fitness and becomingness.

Inexpensively yours — this new home frock designed for your busy days! Try Pattern 9686 by Marian Martin and see how slim it makes you look! The effect is achieved by the narrow skirt panel, the set-in belt, the decorative darts on the bodice. Gaiety is added by the revers edged with lace and the scalloped buttoning! Edge the sleeves too. You'll find this quick to stitch up with the helpful Sew Chart—you'll find it economical to make in one of the new woven cottons like the one shown. Perhaps you'd prefer the revers made of contrast fabric like eyelet pique, and the scalloped buttoning omitted entirely. Little buttons may be used instead to trim the center seam.

Pattern 9688 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 35 inch fabric and 2 yards lace edging.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Marion had the meanings of the newspaper personal all worked out," Mary said slowly. "'Received your shipment' of course meant 'Have received your letter.' 'Okay' meant 'Have worked it all out according to the code.'

"'Sorry to hear of your trouble.'" she went on after a pause. "was to mean 'Everybody well here, loving you and working for you,' while 'Keep the chin up, and 'Remember I am on the job' were to mean exactly what they said."

"You seem to have covered the ground thoroughly," he said at last. "Is there anything else—any slightest thing that you remember of your old conversations?"

Plan for an Answer.

"Yes, there are some other things," Mary answered. "For instance, we canvased the possibility of her being able to get somebody to take an answering 'personal' to the newspaper, or of her wrapping the personal about something hard, with money attached, and throwing it into the street, with an appeal to anyone picking it up to send it to the paper.

"She was very melodramatic, poor baby!" Mary finished with a choke in her voice, and my father's frosty smile touched his lips again.

"Life is melodrama," he said. "Marion is lucky to have realized it so early, for her insistence upon your remembering that code may yet save her life. But her optimism on one point is no doubt cured by now. I mean money," he said. "She has none."

"But Lillian and Harry gave her a very liberal allowance," I said, "and Marion never was a reckless spender. She must have had money in her purse when she left college."

"How long do you think those gangsters would let her keep money?" he asked. "They take no chances on bribery. No, she has no money at her command, and I am afraid there is very little chance of her being able to insert an answering personal in the paper. But it will be a great consolation to her mother to know the child will receive the assurance that her code letters have been understood."

"I shan't forbid either of you to search the personal columns," my father said, with the wraith of a twinkle in his eyes, as we both flushed at his keenness.

"But just now,"—his tone was suddenly brisk and mandatory—"we have something far more important on our hands. Mary, will you please begin making nine copies of that personal, to take care of the morning and afternoon papers? Your Aunt Margaret, no doubt, will help you a little later. Just now I wish to talk to her by herself. Where can we go, Margaret?"

"I can go over to my own rooms and write these," Mary said.

Refers to Rendezvous.

"That is not necessary," I said quickly. "You will find all the material you need for writing those personals in my desk, and Father and I will talk in my bedroom."

"You're sure?" Mary asked doubtfully.

"Absolutely," I returned, smiling at her. Then I led the way into my bedroom with an intuitive prescience of what my father meant to say to me. When he spoke, I knew that my premonition was correct.

"Margaret," he said, with a touch of severity, "Harry and Lillian have just told me that you wish to impersonate her at that foreign restaurant, to which the gangsters have commanded her to come."

"I would like to help Lillian in every possible way in this tragedy," I said, "and this plan of impersonating her at the restaurant tomorrow night seems the best way I can serve her just now."

"I am getting old, Daughter," my father said. "I find that I am letting my fears for your safety hamper my decision in this thing."

"There appears to be no alternative, however," he said. "I suppose you have guessed the real reason for Harry's ultimatum to her, that if she goes to that restaurant he also will go, wounded as he is, risking his life in the gesture."

"No, I have not," I answered truthfully, but prudently refraining from voicing another guess—that Harry would not be risking his life, because his wound was much less serious than the surgeon had intimated.

"It is not regard for Lillian's personal safety which is actuating him—and me—in keeping her away from the restaurant," he said. "Barring something unforseen, the risk we always run, we should be able to guard her adequately.

For Marion's Safety.

"But," he paused, patiently weighing his words, "it is danger to Marion that we fear, if Lillian goes to that rendezvous and has the opportunity to talk to her daughter's captors—or their contact men."

"You mean—"

"I mean that Lillian in her present state of mental fatigue—shall we say?—is not fitted to cope with those men as she ordinarily would be—or as you are. I wish I could say otherwise, my darling, then my conscience would permit me to refuse you permission for this restaurant impersonation."

"But I know," my father went on slowly, "that I must give my consent to this fantastic scheme of yours. That is," he qualified swiftly, "on one condition."

Santa and the WHITE ROSE

THE STORY SO FAR: Carl, a peasant's son, has captured three witches who tried to destroy the Kingdom of the Wide Rivers. He has been helped by Santa Claus in disguise. He loves Princess Hildur.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
CARL WEDS HILDUR; IS MADE KING

SANTA and King Harald and the grandmother watched silently as the little witch floated out of sight on the lily pad.

The air was so quiet that King Harald cocked his head and chuckled. "It WAS the witch. The sound of the guns had stopped. Let's ride across the bridge into the neighboring kingdom."

The King gave the grandmother a purse of gold, and then he and Santa and Carl turned their horses up the river bank to the wide, white bridge across the river.

They were half way over when they saw two people sitting on horses at the edge of the bridge.

"They may shoot," said King Harald.

"No, they won't," said Santa.

"So the three galloped across. Carl shouted, as they did, "Why, it's the King of the Wide Rivers, and Princess Hildur."

And so it was. They had also become curious because the sound of the guns had stopped. King Harald rode straight up to the King of the Wide Rivers and said, "This fighting must never happen again between our people."

"It never will," said the King of the Wide Rivers.

"Have you a plan to prevent it?" asked Carl.

"Have you?" asked Santa.

"Yes," said Carl, and Santa chuckled, because he knew what Carl would say.

CARL said. "These two kingdoms are neighbors. The people do the same things. They have farms. They love their children. Princess Hildur will be queen of her realm, and in our realm, King Harald trusts me. I am only a peasant's son, but may I ask for Princess Hildur's hand?"

King Harald and the King of the Wide Rivers both laughed. They chorused, "Of course, we knew you wanted that some time ago."

Then Santa pulled a holly leaf from his pocket, rubbed it, and his brown suit was gone. He was dressed in that bright, red suit you and I know.

"Santa Claus," shouted Carl.

"Yes," said Santa, "but I couldn't tell you before."

King Harald had been fumbling around his neck. He pulled forth a delicate silver chain and put it around Carl's neck. "This," he said, "has always been worn, day and night, by the kings of my land. You have been the bravest one in all this trouble, and I am growing old. So I name you King from this moment on."

"What are your plans," asked Santa, "I really must get home to finish my toys."

Princess Hildur said softly, "If we have our wedding ceremony on Christmas Eve would you come before you start to deliver all your toys?"

"Certainly," said Santa. So that's what they did.

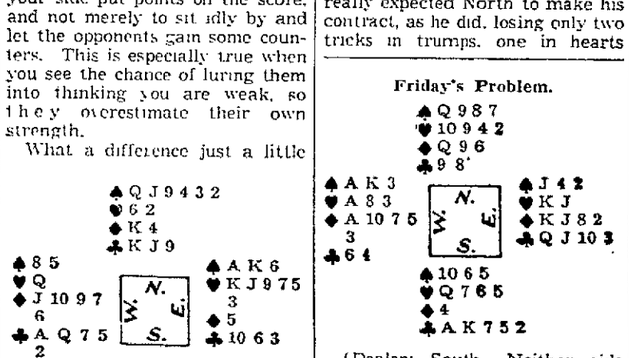
CARL and Hildur were married on Christmas Eve just as the sun set.

Santa brought them a very special present to remind them of the troubles they had conquered. It was a lovely poppy of crystal and every time the Princess Hildur touched a petal it played a new tune.

There was a fine banquet. But when the clock struck 12 Santa and Mrs. Santa had to leave. They hurried to the court-yard, and there they found their sleigh and the reindeer. The sleigh was piled high with all our presents for that year. Carl and Hildur followed them, and stood and waved goodbye as long as they could see Santa's sleigh in the clouds. Just as he disappeared, they heard him call back, "Merry Christmas, and many of them."

And that's what I wish you, "MERRY CHRISTMAS, MANY OF THEM."

THE END.



Just as he disappeared they heard him call back.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

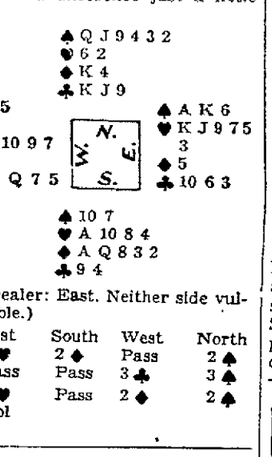
By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

AN AGGRESSIVE PASS

Most bridge players think of the pass as a passive sort of thing—no pun intended. It has an obviously negative sound, as if the player cannot find anything else to do. There are plenty of chances, though, to use the pass as an offensive weapon, intended to help your side put points on the score, and not merely to sit idly by and let the opponents gain some counters. This is especially true when you see the chance of luring them into thinking you are weak, so they overestimate their own strength.

What a difference just a little passing made. In the bidding at the first table, South made his side sound strong, by making an immediate overcall which kept West from bidding on the first round. This made West sound weak to his partner, who didn't even consider doubling later when North got into 3-Spades. East really expected North to make his contract, as he did, losing only two tricks in trumps, one in hearts and one in clubs.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

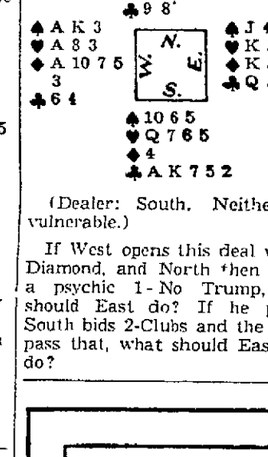
Friday's Problem.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West opens this deal with 1-Diamond, and North then injects a psychic 1-No Trump, what should East do? If he passed, South bids 2-Clubs and the others pass that, what should East then do?

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Dec. 25.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

The spirit of Christmas still hovers gaily over hearts and firesides, but with much tendency to exaggerate the joys in festive indulgence, and to challenge future unpleasant visitations, according to a few adverse planetary aspects. This relates to physical discomforts rather than spiritual and psychological, although in some instances there may be diasproving elders unsympathetic to the carefree ways of youth. A measure of restraint, prudence and cooperation would avert regrets.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which some public contact or service, with community welfare and happiness as objective, is bound to bring surprising progress and self-gratification. Cherished ideals, far vision, humanitarian principles sustained by well-organized plans, as well as subtle strategies, should culminate in great success, with cooperation of those in high places assured. Be alert to falsity and plots.

A child born on this day, while having high principles and ideals, with humanity and social benefits their aim, yet may be easily victimized or intrigued. Its sensitivity may react on its health.

For Friday, Dec. 26.

Hospitality, sociability and good fellowship continue to dominate all activities, both social and business. Whatever of the latter may gain attention will progress and bring future generous returns under these kindly impulses and genial customs. Comradeship and sentimental intent hold sway, perhaps to the height of courtship, engagements and marriage festivities.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a pleasant, happy and progressive year, practical objectives being furthered by the social, hospitable and friendly spirit that abounds in both business and private life. Tendencies to indulge in the sentimental and romantic graces are likely to culminate in happy courtships or marriage celebrations. In all it would be well to maintain a sense of obligation and duty.

A child born on this day will be well-endowed with talents and efficiency in creative lines, attaining place and popularity in art, law or other professional pursuit, and having a happy and successful career.

by REX HESS

When the fat man, with the red cap, comes knocking at your door—

Tonight's the night, neighbor, and you'd better be in.

So trim the tree, hang up the sock, and let the chubby chappie with the white whiskers do the rest.

Of course we can't tell what the hosiery will hold come morning, but we can guess what a few guys would like.

* * *

Look, guls, here's a guy who wants runs in his socks Long runs. The longer the better. Anything up to 100 yards. Whatta run! Whatta sock! It's PAUL SNYDER, coach of the Mansfield Tyger football team who hopes he'll get something just somewhere near as good as his 1941 edition. The whole town's pulling on his sock for that one. Look, Mr. Claus, be a good guy, willya?

And VERN HOFFMAN, mentor of the high school cage team, gets his geometrical dimensions jangled as his letter to Mr. C. puts in an order for a sock full of buckets. Lotsa buckets.. His Tyger tossers can use 'em.

ART (Two Gun) HILBORN wants some kegling ammunition for that third game, where he's been falling down all too regularly lately with a record score in sight.

And while you're fumbling around with DONNA SCHUSTER'S stocking, Mr. C. you might drop in a 300 game. She's been putting in her bid for it often enough these last few days.

For my gurl friends, the PROVIDENT LOANS there should be a third straight Ohio softball championship. And the same order goes for THELMA LINSTER in her quest for her third straight Ohio public links title.

And what better wish would you wangle for AL HAGER than the Ohio high school golf title in 1942?

BUD SPRUNGER wants enlightenment. For his N-J cohorts. So others may see his Madison Rams as he sees 'em. Champeens—in everything.

HARRY MEHOCK doesn't want much. Just a record entry list in the Mansfield Relays. A track team of his own that'll make a showing in the same. And a stadium to seat 20,000 for his Mansfield school physical-ed demonstration.

Kinda pugnacious about the whole thing is PAUL CARBETTA. "Just give me a fight, Mr. C., that's all I ask." is Paulie's plea.

JUNE (Slugger) PITTENGER is modest in her demands. Four hits next year instead of three.

I know the old boy with the long beard has arranged a big time for LESTER (Bill) BRINING of Tappan Stove when he attends the reunion of Mt Vernon high school's 1922 state championship cage team next Monday night

And now if old Nick is listenin', here are a few knick-knacks a few of the Possum Run golfers would like:

No flubbed approaches that would mar
The game of JARRIN' JOHNNY CARR.
And PETE LINSTER hopes he's seen
The last MAYER eagle on eighteen.
MAURICE BYRNES will give you thanks
If you take away his shanks.
And bring for me, I hope you do.
A hole-in-one on Number Two

And if that doesn't stagger him too much, and he's still listenin'—. There are just a lot of guys and gals I forgot to remember in this little Santy Claus letter, and I hope he doesn't do the same tonight.

So it's Merry Christmas and all good wishes to you, and you and all of you.

Winbigler Leads Tygers to 47-38 Victory Over Collinwood Club

BOB "WINDY" WINBIGLER was a ball of fire last night as he paced Mansfield high school's Tygers to a 47-38 victory over Cleveland Collinwood at the high school gym.

Windy brought nine buckets, 18 points, to the party. And he didn't need any help from Santa Claus. He really trimmed the tree, all by himself. And the shots he missed were close enough to be ornamental

The Tygers showed a lot of early foot as they grabbed a 14-11 lead over Harry Newman's Railroaders, and piled up a 28-16 lead at half-time. Collinwood closed the gap by two points in the third stanza to make it 36-26, and battled on even terms in the final session for the 47-38 windup.

* * *

Windy talhed again on a one-hander from the circle in 15 seconds of the second period. Pitz dribbled in for a bucket. Dietzel got loose for a sucker shot. Schapple got a free point. Shiplet hooped a follow shot and Winbigler canned a long shot from the side to make it 22-11.

Palumbo missed a pair of free tosses and then made up for it with a follow shot. Winbigler got a short one-hander and Dietzel a follow shot Hahn talhed under the bucket for a 28-16 half-time lead

J Vaikshoras opened the second-half scoring with an underbucket shot Dietzel scored on the pivot and Hahn added a one-hander from the side. A. and J. Vaikshoras each talhed for the visitors to bring it back to 32-22.

Winbigler got a follow shot, J. Vaikshoras a short shot and Farmoska a free point. Pitz also hooped a free point. Joe Romano talhed under the hoop for a 36-26 margin at the third quarter.

Windy scored under the hoop and Dietzei got a free point. C. Vaikshoras hooped a pair of free points and Schapple got a sucker shot. Palumbu canned a free shot and it was 39-31.

Robertson crashed through with a pair of buckets on a long shot and a bunny. J. Vaikshoras got a one-hander from the circle, and it was 43-33. Shiplet got two free points. Somrack hooped a long shot from the side. Little Flick Flockenzier, subbing for Winbigler, looped a long shot from the corner. Detroit Eagles Battle Toledo, Tuesday, Jan. 6.

The world champion Detroit Eagles and the Toledo Jim Whites, powerful National professional cage league team, have signed to play an exhibition game in Mansfield high school gym Tuesday night, January 6, under the auspices of the Mansfield City "A" league. Contracts have been signed late yesterday by Joe Lesch, representing the City league, and Hank Rigney, Toledo promoter representing the professional teams.

Mansfield fans have been treated to some fine professional games in the past, but nothing compared to what the world champions and the Jim Whites are expected to unfold.

The Detroit Eagles, coached by Dutch Dehnert, famous New York Celtic star of recent years, won the world's crown in competition with the 16 best clubs in the nation, before 59,000 fans in Chicago's international amphitheater last spring.

The Toledoans won fourth place in the tournament and their ace shotmaker, Chuck Chuckovits, won the No. 1 All-American pro title. Chuckovits broke the tournament scoring record by 17 points as he banged home 82 points in four games against the New York Renaissance, Sheboygan Redskins, Oshkosh All Stars, and Chicago Bruins.

Mansfield fans who have enjoyed watching Chuckovits and Toledo play in former years are in for a real treat. Heretofore Chuckovits has been the whole show. Best since joining the National pro league, Toledo has stepped out and signed nationally famous stars to work with the Chucker. These players are all new to Mansfield fans.

Training with Chuckovits at forward will be Wilton "Scoop" Putnam, former Tennessee university All-American. At center will be Big Bill Thompson, DeSales college flash, who averaged 28 points per game over a four year stretch. Tommy Wukovits, Notre Dame captain of two years ago, will start at one guard, with the brilliant George "Scat" Nelmark of Missouri State Teachers college at the other defensive post.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON — The maxims of professional prize-fighting sometimes have a direct application to the art of war. Frequently they are too tricky. One that is not and that has often been quoted here is that of old Bob Fitzsimmons: "In a finish fight, you can't punch soft and live. Give 'im all you got or get out of the ring before they carry you out." That is right every time in war.

Gen. Johnson.

To an extent few people imagined this war has multiplied the meaning of the maxim, because "all you got" means literally "all"—not merely men but, materials, morale and money, but also the hard-won reputations of men. This column has been preaching that doctrine for almost eight years. It is naturally gratified, at this long last, to see most of them wholly or partly adopted or on their way to adoption.

Among the latest of these are: First, greater concentrations of power in each different department of industry in a federal chief, each with single and direct responsibility; second, immediate recognition, by rank and honors of proved efficiency in commanders and immediate punishment by demotion of those who fail. Nothing that obstructs victory can be permitted to stand.

As was remarked here yesterday, the organization of federal control over industry still lags. There has been an extreme reluctance to apply the ruthless rule of demotions or eliminations of failures and outright recognition of merit that was applied to army and navy officers in the Pacific.

Still these principles seem to be having some recognition. The ridiculously worded order shifting the duties of Leon Henderson seems on careful analysis to demote him. But I am reliably told that it was gladly concurred in by him and written as it was because it gave him an opportunity to exercise the power he needs without any more specification, and, in view of his record in getting results without specified final powers, he felt willing to take the chance. I have seen him do just that and have rarely seen him fail.

Sometimes the reasons for these actions do not appear at once. This strange method of advancing Henderson by seeming to give him the boot is said to have been partly a result of Hillman's wishes and sensibilities. In General MacArthur's splendid and deserved promotion without an overwhelming and final victory, the fact that Chiang Kai Chek is a Chinese generalissimo and might one day demand superior command in his rank in the Orient, is said to have had a bearing.

That raises another question. MacArthur is in a tough spot. It would be very sad if, because of the difficulty of supplying and supporting him, he might fail and have the ruthless rule of handling high commanders applied to him in reverse. It would be sad but not as sad as some other possible sky-rocket rise and fall could be. A regular officer once demoted for inefficiency usually returns home to live out his life in bitterness and disappointment.

Those who know this classmate of mine well are sure he would not be brought home discredited. After a classic defense, he would be found dead on the field of battle at the head of his troops. Our army never produced a more gallant soldier.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

(And To All, V....—)

Hark, Manhattan, Queens and Staten
Brooklyn, and the Bronnix,
Ring the bells and chant noels
In lusty diatonics!

Though the news that we peruse
Is earnest, grim, and critical,
Take heart, City! Here's a ditty
Firmly non-political.

Christmas greetings, Yuletide benisons,
I send to the following Gotham denizens:

On New York's fairest Little Flower,
Mayor LaGuardia, greetings shower;
Greetings, too, this bard encloses
For Park Commissioner Robert Moses,
Greetings to all the borough Presidents
Greetings to all the borough residents,
To soldiers, air raid wardens, sailors,
Firemen, cops, floor-walkers, tailors,
Sanitation workers, waiters,
Elevator operators.

Subway guards, street-car conductors,
Swing musicians, dance instructors,
Tug-boat captains, soda-jerks,
Movie ushers, shipping clerks,
Housewives bus boys, chormes, bookies,
Nice old ladies selling cookies,
Broadway comic, deep-sea divers,
Subway posters, taxi-drivers,
To folks at varied sorts of labors,
Merry merry Christmas, neighbors!

And Greetings this department posts.
To all the city's favorite hosts;
To Monte Proser, Fefe Ferry,
Dario, Bob Christenberry,
Billingsley; and I intone a
Greeting, too, for John Perona.
To Sardi, Frank Case, Toots the Shor,
To all the Kriendlers, greetings soar;

SCHEDULE BUS STRIKE TALKS AT WASHINGTON

Greyhound Officials, AFL To Seek Accord In Tie-up of Holiday Traffic.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND — With holiday travel over its lines at a complete standstill, Central Greyhound Bus line officials and representatives of the AFL-Motor Coach Employes union were to meet in Washington today with federal conciliators in an attempt to resume strike negotiations broken off when the union ordered a walkout of 2,000 drivers, terminal helpers and maintenance employes.

The strike began Dec. 3 when Greyhound garage employes walked off their jobs as the union claimed cleaning women were not being paid the 60-cents-an-hour scale called for in the contract. Until yesterday only three lines were tied up by the strike.

Then Samuel E. Berrong, union international executive board member, arranged a meeting with Robert W. Budd, Greyhound president, which Budd refused to attend because no federal conciliator was to be present.

The strike followed, paralyzing all Greyhound central commuter and long distance lines from Chicago to New York and Boston in the midst of heavy Christmas travel.

With no attempt being made by the company to operate regular runs, 50 buses were made available here and 45 more in New York for use of the army in transporting soldiers from army camps to their homes for Christmas furloughs.

The buses were serviced when a request came from the army command at Camp Lee, Va., for transportation facilities for the soldiers. The company said the buses would be turned over to the army when drivers were provided.

Budd, meanwhile, announced that the lines' garage in Detroit had been sold to Great Lakes Greyhound, Inc. The 80 garage employes who walked out when the general strike was called were expected to return to work today as a result of the shift in management.

It may be scheduled for the night after Christmas but the annual children's party at the Salvation Army is causing no end of expectation in the hearts of the 200 youngsters who will attend the event. There's to be entertainment and a treat as well as sandwiches, ice cream and cake, with a few surprises tossed in for good measure.

Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals is thinking of adopting "Don't Be a Pinhead," as a slogan for motorists. Boals intends to use pins with varicolored heads to mark the scenes of accidents which occur in the city. The map will be used in connection with a new accident report system which will be used to eliminate the more dangerous driving points in the city. Boals said he plans to insert a new pin with each new accident. After a specified number have occurred at any given point, a special traffic study of that section will be made.

Although the Richland county courthouse was to be open all afternoon today, the county commissioners joined in the Christmas spirit and told workers they could go home if they wanted to. Most of them planned to stay on the job, however, and stage their customary holiday parties. Offices on the third floor of the building conducted a gift exchange in the clerk of courts office and the employes in the auditor's office on the second floor had their own party, also exchanging gifts. The third floor workers had a lot of fun with their exchange, for most of the presents were surprises that turned out to be toys.

Yesterday, the employes paid for their dinner and according to Mrs. Blumenschein, they "ate more than usual."

FOLLOWS ON ANTI-STRIKE AGREEMENT

Workers and Management Promise No Tie-ups For Any Cause During War.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt today was expected to establish a war labor board within a few days to carry out the program for uninterrupted production drafted by his industry-labor conferences.

The board of probably nine men may be similar to that of the first World war. It would be authorized to make recommendations but would have no powers other than public opinion to enforce them.

Both labor and industry representatives have pledged that there will be no strikes or lockouts "for any cause" during the war. All disputes, they agreed, shall be settled by "peaceful means."

Establishment of the board, probably by executive order, as well as its functions and powers, was left entirely to Mr. Roosevelt.

President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations complimented the conferees "for the wholesome contribution they have made in bringing about this accord." He said the CIO would lend all of its power and influence to prevent strikes and other stoppages that interfere with production.

Labor officials expected that anti-strike legislation by congress, delayed during the six-day conference, would be dropped. Sen. Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) said he saw "no reason" for anti-strike legislation in view of the no-strike pledge. Thomas was associate moderator of the conference and author of the proposal accepted by it.

Mr. Roosevelt acted as an arbiter after a deadlock over the closed shop had threatened collapse of the conference. The 12 management representatives unanimously insisted on an amendment excluding consideration by the new board of closed shop demands.

They agreed, at the insistence of Moderator William H. Davis, to accept whatever decision Mr. Roosevelt made. The president ruled against excluding closed shop disputes. The government, he said, "must act in general."

The new war labor board probably will replace the national defense mediation board set up nine months ago by Mr. Roosevelt to mediate disputes affecting defense.

Scouts Ready To Fire First Guns In Election Drive

With candidates picked by both parties for county offices in the annual Boy Scout mock elections to be held Jan. 28, Scouts living outside of Mansfield have drawn up platforms for both Nationalist and Federalist parties, it was announced today.

While Mansfield Scouts have not yet finished with their primary election of city officials, troops outside the city are all set to fire the opening gun in the campaign for the final election of all candidates, which will be held next month.

The Nationalist platform for candidates for county offices include pledges for all types of civilian defense, for promotion of the sale of defense bonds and stamps, conservation of defense materials, all out aid, and reporting of any Unamerican activities.

Federalist candidates on the opposite side of the political fence promise their county constituents better roads, steel bridges over Touby's run, more pheasants and rabbits, and less mosquitoes. Federalist candidates also declare themselves "100 per cent against the Japs," ready in case of emergency and for greater sales of defense bonds.

SET UP PLAN

Defense Board Sets Up Broad Farm Production Program.

Meeting with the Richland county defense board last night at the Triple A office in Mansfield, farm leaders from each of the county's 18 townships chose at least 15 men from each township to contact farmers in the food-for-defense drive.

It was planned to have every campaigner visit about 10 farmers in his county soon after the first of the year to urge them to put their farm equipment in condition for stepped-up food production next year.

Every county farmer will be asked to participate in the all-out food production drive, but participation will not be compulsory. The U. S. department of agriculture has asked farmers throughout the nation to raise more hogs, cattle, and poultry next year so there will be adequate supplies of meat, eggs and milk products for the armies of democratic countries.

POPE CALLS FOR LIMITING ARMS

Envisions New Era After War In Annual Christmas Message To World.

(By Associated Press)

VATICAN CITY — (Official broadcast recorded by AP)—Pope Pius XII proposed a progressive limitation of armaments in his Christmas eve message to the world broadcast today by the Vatican radio.

The pope envisioned a new era arising from the ashes of the world struggle and declared there must be no place in it for military force to threaten humanity.

"There must be a progressive limitation of armaments," he said. "True respect for treaties must be observed."

The principles of freedom and equality of rights, for all people must underlie that new day.

"Great responsibilities for the future of mankind rest on statesmen of the world," he said. "We need men of courage, vision and conscience to reconstruct the world."

The pope outlined a program for the world when its great states organize it in the "interest of all," when there is respect for the rights of minorities, just control of its raw materials so no nation shall suffer unfairly" and when there "is no place for oppression."

The pontiff spoke of "men who have turned from Christ" and of souls without faith with the result that "all of civilization's values are endangered."

His Holiness said "the whole earth is awaiting the triumph of Christ."

MILITARY, CHRISTMAS COLORS MIX AS SOLDIERS COME HOME

Military colors will mix with the customary holiday colors this Christmas in Mansfield and the rest of the nation.

Scores of the city's sons now in various branches of the armed service are home on furlough—but the number is much smaller than it would have been if the nation were not at war. Many leaves originally scheduled were cancelled because of the war.

Richland county has approximately 1,000 of its young men in the army, navy, and marine corps. Of that number, approximately 500 would have been home for Christmas under customary furlough practice.

But this year it is different. Only about 15 or 20 per cent of the young men in service are enjoying that leave cherished by service men—a Christmas furlough.

An estimated 150 to 200 men stationed in army camps and naval training stations are home for the holiday. A number of others, particularly those in west coast training camps, are spending short Christmas leaves visiting cities new to them, or staying at friends' homes, because they are too far from home to try to make it for the holiday.

SQUADRON FLIES SAFELY

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND — (U.P.) — A Coastal Command squadron has the enviable record of 2,000 hours of operational flying in three months without an accident. Much of this flying was done by night, and in adverse weather and the intense cold and snowstorms early this year.

THIEVES DISRUPT WIRES

BUENOS AIRES—(U.P.)—Railway telegraph service was interrupted between Buenos and Rosario — Argentina's two largest cities—one day recently. Linemen, checking the cause, found that thieves had removed and carried away about a half-mile of wire.

GENERAL STOCK TRENDS MIXED, SOME ARE WEAK

New Record Set For Week's Power Consumption In United States.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market today was colored by further weakness in American Telephone, but general trends were mixed and a few industrials registered better marks in early dealings.

Regarded by business students as gauge of industry's efforts to step up production for the war was the Edison Electric institute's report showing power consumption for the week ended Dec. 20 at a new historic high of 3,448,597,000 kilowatt hours.

This represented a gain of .5 per cent over the previous week's output and a rise of 13 per cent over the same period last year.

JAPS STEP UP SUBMARINE WAR

Craft Sink Tanker, Attack Three Other Ships Off California Coast.

erating in "wolf packs," after the German pattern.

The Montebello went down yesterday, 45 minutes after a Jap submarine had fired a torpedo into her port side. Captain Olof Eckstrom and 35 other members of the crew reached shore in four lifeboats. None was seriously injured, although many of them sufefred from exposure.

Another enemy submarine attacked the Richfield Oil company tanker, Larry Doheny. The vessel, by clever maneuvering, escaped the sub and made port in a nearby harbor.

The tanker Idaho, owned by the Texas company, reached a California port after being chased for several days by an enemy submarine.

Unexplained explosions in the past day or two have been heard at two widely separated sections of the California coast. The blasts shook homes for 20 miles inland, but the nature of the explosions remained a mystery.

The Canadian Freighter Rosebank, of 2,000 tons, was unreported today and overdue at a California port by more than 24 hours. The navy had no information concerning the ship.

30 Survivors of Sub Attack Safe

HONOLULU — (AP) — Thirty gaunt and exhausted survivors of the torpedoed freighter Lahaina, sunk by a Japanese submarine in the Pacific Dec. 11, reached a Hawaiian beach in a 20-foot lifeboat after nine and one-half days at sea, it become known today.

When they approached the shore at Spreckelsville, Maui island, at dawn last Monday they were mistaken for an enemy landing party until they made their identity known.

Two of the crew died aboard the crowded lifeboat from exposure and exhaustion and two others leaped overboard. One seaman died a few hours after the boat made land.

The 5,646-ton Matson freighter was 800 miles out of Ahukini, Kauai island, when she was shelled and left afire and sinking.

Captain Hanso Matthiesen said the submarine, described as about 200 feet long, fired from 2,000 yards and then again from 300 yards. He estimated 12 of 25 shots fired struck the Lahaina.

CHRISTMAS

Christmas day and all that it symbolizes, all that it has meant to us as a nation and as individuals; this has not and never will change.

BUT

in this Yule season of 1941 conditions throughout the world have changed . . . happy, peace-loving nations like our own are confronted by the will of powerful dictators . . . we are in the midst of war—a definite struggle for survival of democracy that we may again have "peace on earth and good will toward men."

We celebrate this Christmas with Determination and Hope.

DETERMINATION to completely eradicate the vile, evil influences of soulless dictators—selfishness, prejudice, greed, hate,—from the world as a whole.

HOPE for Victory and the coming of an early peace—hope for the safe return of our boys who have pledged their lives to your and my defense and the defense of democracy we love so well.

So long as Christmas can awaken in men the traditional spirit of giving and of sacrifice, so long as the hearts of men open, and the faces of men are unashamed of that softness and sentimentality which is part and parcel of Christmas, so long shall mankind be justified in asserting its kinslup with Deity.

Seasons Greetings
